

Thank you for taking the time to contact the National Center for Family Philanthropy (NCFP) and share your story. The mission of NCFP is to promote philanthropic values, vision, and excellence across generations of donors and donor families. We provide the resources, expertise, and support to family foundations looking to make a lasting impact with their giving.

NCFP is not a grantmaking organization, and we do not recommend grants from family foundations and funds to specific organizations or interest areas. Ethically, we do not give the contact information of family foundations in our network to those looking for funding. Nor do we track their giving patterns or priorities. We do offer some information to the public on our website both so you will be better aware of what we do and what they do.

If you're seeking funding, you may wish to check out these resources:

- Contact family philanthropies directly to inquire about programs, grants, and application guidelines. For contact information, visit the Foundation Center.
- Visit GuideStar, an organization that offers the 990s of foundations along with other relevant information
- Contact your local Community Foundation or Regional Association of Grantmakers to identify and connect with prospective funders in your area.

As a fellow grantee, these are our go to resources when doing prospective funder research. I hope they are helpful to you and we wish you luck with your fundraising endeavors.
